Essential reading for all doctors

Hospital Medicine is the leading clinical review journal in the UK, and has a history spanning over 30 years.

It contains authoritative, topical and in-depth clinical reviews that are commissioned on the advice of an editorial board consisting of internationally renowned specialists in their fields. All articles are peer-reviewed before final selection, thus ensuring that only the highest quality articles appear in the journal.

We can provide up-to-the minute review articles giving you all the information you need on each topic in a concise, fully referenced and easy-to-read format. The journal also includes:

- Editorials which give a more personal and sometimes controversial opinion on current affairs within hospita medicine
- Symposia which are specific supplements on specific topics
- Education and training The Education and Training section of Hospital Medicine is the most rapidly developing section of the journal. It addresses practical training issues, of concern to all hospital doctors, whatever their grade of speciality. The articles include a mixture of reviews specially commissioned from experts, original research, descriptions of successful, well-evaluated educationa initiatives, and proposals for change. All articles are peer-reviewed
- Case reports looking at unusual presentations and how they were resolved
- Book reviews giving the view of your peers on new books and other resources
- Web watch giving critical reviews of specific web sites that may be of use to hospital doctors

With all this, a regular correspondence column and much more besides, Hospital Medicine is indispensable reading for doctors who want to know what is going on in hospital medicine.
